10 Years Too Many:

National Day of Action Against Guantánamo

- A rally in Washington DC that will stretch into a human chain of over 2,000 people – representing the people still detained without charge or fair trial at Guantánamo and Bagram – stretching from the White House to the Capitol. We will chant, we will hold signs, we will not be silent.
- Close Guantánamo & reform Bagram
- End indefinite detention and unfair military commissions
- Charge and fairly try detainees or release them
- Ensure accountability for torture: investigate, prosecute and provide remedy for victims
- Revise Appendix M of the Army Field Manual
- Fight Islamophobia

With few exceptions, the Bush detention regime has been more deeply institutionalized by the Obama administration, and the failure to close Guantánamo is but one in a string of unkept promises. While the media has decided to ignore the issue, a bipartisan consensus is emerging to commit permanently to terrible policies. We need to speak out with a new determination to reach policy-makers, the media, and the public.

Buses will be coming to Washington DC from cities throughout the Eastern United States.
